GREAT VOTE FOR KENNY

Today Coldest in Seven Years

ALL NEW ENGLAND SHIVERS

Boston was nipped today by the coldest weather it has known for seven years. It was estimated that 100,000 suburbanites were held up by delayed trains. Thousands walked in from the South Station trainyard.

The official temperature at 7 a. m. was six degrees below zero, the January 24, 1907, the 7 a. m. temperature was seven below.

Suburban and State temperature readings were much lower. Sixteen below was reported from Lowell, Rowley and Ipswich.

Waltham, at thirteen below, was one of the coldest spots of the Metropolitan District.

Union, N. H., cracked at twenty-four below; Dover, N. H., was twenty below.

The coldest place on the U. S. weather map was Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., at seventy-six below.

The official temperature in Boston rose slightly toward noon, when it was still cold enough at 2 below zero.

The delay in incoming suburban trains caused language hot enough to break the cold wave, if it could have reached the weather works.

WIRES ARE BROKEN.

The New Haven road offices admitted trouble. The night freeze snapped telegraph wires. Not a wire was working today on the New Haven road between Boston and Braintree, as one sample of the trouble. Train orders were telephoned.

The night gale which swept through the wide train yard of the South Station blew out switch-lights, causing more confusion.

The cold "froze" engines, even in the round-houses. The engineers could not get up steam.

The net result, when the suburban rush began, was delay of ten minutes to two hours on in-bound trains. Long strings of local trains, filled with impatient passengers, were stalled at the South Station yard. One blockade was estimated to stretch back a half mile.

The result was that passengers began to get out, walk along to South Boston station, at the lower end of the train yard, climb the stairway to Dover street bridge and then walk or take trolleys to their work.

Some passengers, whose destination was around Summer, Federal, High and other streets off the South Terminal Station, walked along the tracks, through the train yard and to the trainshed. Finally trainmen, fearing some passengers, women and

Big Schooner Sinks in Nantucket Sound

VINEYARD HAVEN, Jan. 12.—While being towed to safety by the rescue cutter Acushnet, the three-masted schooner John Paul of Ellsworth, Me., sank in Nantucket Sound today.

A wireless message from the Acushnet reported the disaster, but made no mention of the fate of the crew. Because of the high wind and extremely cold weather a transfer of the crew to the revenue cutter would have been difficult, it was pointed out by seafaring men.

Senate Passes Gore Oil Pipe Line Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The Senate today passed the Gore resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Navy and the Interior to investigate the feasibility of building a government pipe line from the Oklahoma oil fields to a point on the Gulf of Mexico. The pipe line, if built, would be used to supply naval vessels with fuel oil. The resolution also directs an inquiry into the wisdom of government leasing of Indian oil lands in Oklahoma.

Held as Plotter in Macvane Case

TARANTO, Italy, Jan. 13.—The police have arrested Carlo Carrucci, who is supposed to be an accomplice of Cicala in an attempt to blackmail Miss Dorothea Macvane. According to the accusation, Carrucci pretended to be a correspondent of Roman newspapers, showing correspondence already written, injurious to Miss Macvane.

Master a Trade—Earn Independence

In Greater Boston's great factories there's always room for a man who thinks he can "make good." Always is there a demand for energy and ambition—for these are the materials with which they make master workmen.

Master workmen—men who are masters of their trade; the very name stands for independence. There is no limit to the success which these men may attain.

And the way to enter the ranks is simple: Turn to the "Help Wanted" ads, a few pages over. Likely there are several splendid opportunities being offered today.

If not, it will pay you to write a little "Situation Wanted" ad of your own and see that it appears in tomorrow's American. There's no time like NOW.

JEROME BOUND TO 'GET' THAW

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 13.—William Travers Jerome telephoned from New York city today to Bernard Jacobs, local attorney for the State of New York, to fight the proposed bail of Harry K. Thaw every inch of the way.

Jerome will come in person to combat the Thaw forces at the bail hearing, which is to be held by Judge Aldrich at some date yet to be announced.

"I shall come to Concord myself at the time of the bail hearing," said Jerome over the wire to Jacobs, "and I shall fight this case to the utmost." This declaration by Thaw's persecutor "Nemesis" is in line with Jerome's statement of the day before that the report of the Thaw sanity commission avails nothing and that he will "get" Thaw yet.

DENY PLEA FOR TIME.

Meanwhile the Thaw forces indignantly deny that they are "sparring for time" and became Merrill Shurtleff has filed a petition for an extension of time for filing his brief, along with his petition for a hearing on the bail question.

Shurtleff maintained today that the bail hearing and the granting of bail, as he expects, will expedite the filing of the final brief. Shurtleff said:

"I have filed with the United States District Court a motion for a report of the Thaw Sanity Commission. We understand, unofficially, that this report favors the release of Thaw on bail, and wish to secure an early hearing on it.

"We further understand that Judge Aldrich is ill, but suppose that the court will communicate with Mr. Jerome before fixing a date for the hearing asked for by us today.

"I expect that my motion for more time in which to prepare my brief for a writ of habeas corpus will be granted as a matter of course. The fact that Mr. Jerome has filed his petition in advance of ours will not in any way interfere with our plans.

"I have not noticed any undue delay in the proceedings so far. This is all that I care to say regarding the delay alleged in the claims advanced by others.

WASTING NO TIME.

"We feel obliged to ask for more time on our brief, as it is not ready. There is no time being wasted by us. We can't do four or five things at once.

"I believe that Judge Aldrich recognizes this fact, and that he will not extend us for time in which property to which we are not entitled."

Bernard Jacobs, the New Hampshire attorney acting as Jerome's aid, became Nemesis in New Hampshire, filed today the brief on the question of the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus, now pending. He said:

"As to the commission's report that no acts of violence have been committed by Thaw since he has been in Matteawan, that has nothing to do with the case. It was proved once that he had delusions and that he killed a man in one of them. It does not matter whether he has committed any acts of violence since or not. The question is this:

"Does he still have the delusions?"

For Better Schools Instead of More

In a special report to the Legislature today the State Board of Education declares that the State has a sufficient number of normal schools and recommends the development of the present facilities rather than the establishment of more schools.

HOW GABY DESLYS WOULD APPEAR IN NEW BEAUTY FAD

Friends of Gaby Deslys, who is now in this country, have been wondering when the noted dancer would take up the "painted figure" face. Their curiosity may be satisfied now, as the picture shows how Gaby would look if she followed the Russian and French fashionables.

Suspect Taken in Trunk Mystery

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—One of the men who purchased the trunk in which Ivan Martyswitch was found dead in Pitts street, on December 29, was arrested today. He gave the name of Victor Muravlof to the police, who say he made a confession. A formal charge of homicide was placed against him. Muravlof said he knew the body was in the trunk, but had had no part in any murder. The police believe that the real murderer was a woman who gave the victim "knockout drops."

Parisian women have gone wild over the freakish new fashion of painting the figures of animals and people on their faces, necks and cheeks.

Elephants, trees, commercial designs, like arabesques, florals and checker-patterns—all these are indulged in. Hardly anything is too fanciful. One design that is styled "charming" depicts an ugly hippopotamus, grinning from the smooth, plump neck of a pretty woman.

This painting of figures on the face or neck is really a reversion to the old idea of the beauty patch, which belles of three or four generations ago prized so highly, to accentuate the clarity of their complexions.

Nathalie Gourtchakoff, the Russian woman painter, completed the fancy of painting a little Eiffel on the neck of a patron—not on the neck of a portrait, but on the flesh itself. Now the fad has spread, and Paris fashionables are delighting themselves with it.

KENNY REVEALS BIG STRENGTH AT POLLS AFTER NOON HOUR

With the mildest temperature of many a tempestuous Kenny vote flocked to the polls in the residential districts, and Thomas J. Kenny's stock took a boom, while the Curley supporters looked glum.

In Ward 18 Senator Timilty leads Gale to sweep the ward for Kenny. In Ward 20 former Congressman O'Connell was doing the same thing. Twenty-one and 22 likewise showed Kenny strength. The South End words especially showed Kenny strength, while in the Back Bay Charles H. Innes and his cohorts marshalled a tremendous noon time vote.

KENNY CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

THOUSANDS DIE BY VOLCANO ON JAPANESE ISLE

NAGASAKI, Japan, Jan. 13.—Thousands of persons are believed to have perished in the eruption of the volcano Sakura-Jima, which devastated Kirhara Island and destroyed the city of Kagoshima in the worst natural disaster Southern Japan has known in more than fifty years.

Final telegraph messages from Kagoshima before the city was overwhelmed by fire set by the molten lava flood that [illegible] men, women and children [illegible] killed.

When Kagoshima was destroyed the entire population of the city and town numbered from 65,000 to 75,000. Up to the hour of [illegible] from Sakura Island and other islands in Kagoshima Bay to take refuge in the city.

Ashes to the depth of [illegible] feet filled the streets of Kagoshima when the wind brightened and [illegible] rain of red hot stone and shattered [illegible] houses. Repeated [illegible] tremors. were many women at the polls voting on the school committee fight.

Ward 9, where "Boiling Jim" Donovan was leading the Kenny forces, showed only a moderate vote in the first eight in Precinct 1 five hundred and forty votes behind the vote of the gubernatorial election. Nominations were active everywhere.

NORMAL CHARLESTOWN VOTE

From the Charlestown wards, 6, came reports of a normal vote. One-third of the total was cast by 4 o'clock. Senator Brennan and Councillor Buckley were working for Daly. Councillor Curley, an avowed candidate for mayor, elected a surprising strength in his candidate in the wards.

Ward 56, normally the strong Republican precinct, was a falling off. In October 1912 it voted one hundred and forty below normal.

Ward 11 reported light vote. The cold was more intense here than in other sections. In Ward 11 Precinct 4, in the old fifty votes in the first two hours. Precinct 6, in the old church on Chelsea street, the election officers found no heat, the windows broken, and the place cold as a tomb. They telephoned a protest to the election commissioners and were promised help.

Ward 26, Precinct 12, reported a heavy vote at the end of two hours, with the voters coming faster all the time.

In Ward 2, Precinct 5, a heavy local option vote was out at 2 o'clock, in other precincts in the ward the vote averaged about 22, but in this precinct 100 men had voted and they were mostly Republicans.

In Ward 19 there were workers everywhere. Precinct 1 had 73 votes at 2 o'clock, in Precinct 8 there was a steady stream of voters.

Ward 22, Mayor Fitzgerald's home district, was concentrated on its efforts to get out the vote, now nearing completion. Precincts 6 and 7 seemed to be strong for Kenny, while Curley was rather strong in 2 and 3. In Precinct 7, 200 votes were cast, 175 votes out, before one o'clock. Curley had no apparent advantage.

Ward 23 was a land of Curley workers, especially in Precinct 9.

NOTABLE VOTE IN CITY

In the city, about 2,200 votes had been cast up to the first two hours and a half. There are 13,000 voters in the ward. Precinct 8, considered an even break between Kenny and Curley, had 100 votes in the first hour. The most active is in the Dedham section, where the Democrats showed up and broke eight hats in the first hour. Voters with their ballots to their ears did not remember to stop for the lon noor.

Chairman James F. Landers of the Ward 20 Democratic Club was working for Curley, with the Senators and Representatives from the district. Ex-Congressman O'Connell and his brother, Jimmie O'Connell, were bringing out a strong vote in the Upper Roxbury district.

POLLING PLACE FIRELESS.

Ward 21, with sixteen precincts, and about 5,700 registered, had 1,500 out in the first hour. The outlying precincts were light, but the vote was steady in the better populated precincts. Precinct 1 had 102 votes in Precinct 8, in the old church on Chelsea street, the election officers found no heat, the windows broken, and the place cold as a tomb hall. They telephoned a protest to the election commissioners and were promised help.

Ward 26, Precinct 12, reported a heavy vote at the end of two hours, with the voters coming faster all the time.

In Ward 2, Precinct 5, a heavy local option vote was out at 2 o'clock, in other precincts in the ward the vote averaged about 22, but in this precinct 100 men had voted and they were mostly Republicans.

In Ward 19 there were workers everywhere. Precinct 1 had 73 votes at 2 o'clock, in Precinct 8 there was a steady stream of voters.

WARMER TOMORROW.

Trains from Wollaston were over an hour late. Two hours' delay was the exasperating story told by passengers from Wollaston. As their trains approached the Boston yard they would be a stop and a wait, then another and another, until it seemed as though the engineer was trying to keep the train in by its heatstrapie.

Dispatches from Washington say that warmer weather is promised for tomorrow by the Federal weather bureau.

The cold wave struck with cruel force upon all unfortunates who lacked warm clothing and warm homes. The police kept extra sharp watch for vagrancers who might be overcome by the extreme low temperature.

The weather story from New Hampshire was even worse that that from the Merrimack valley. Here were some frigidic state temperatures:

Dover—25 below.
Derry—26 below.
Portsmouth—20 below.
Somersville—21 below.
Wolfsboro—18 below.
Fort Constitution, Portsmouth 15 below.

Mount Island—8 below.

Several weather dispatches reported the entire eastern section of the country, as far south as Georgia, gripped by the cold wave, with wind blowing as high as seventy-five miles an hour.

Chicago reported 126,000 men idle in Chicago. The free lodging houses there were committed to turn away hundreds. The mercury was down to 12 degrees below zero.

Dispatches from New York reported terrible suffering among the poor. The city streets were bitterly cold. The police stations and municipal lodging houses in Manhattan were jammed to overflowing.

Buffalo reported 8 below zero at 8 o'clock. Thirty below zero prevails in the Adirondacks. Philadelphia shivers in 10 below. Detroit, Mich., has a new low weather record for this Winter, 3 below.

Great suffering was felt among striking miners in the Calumet & Hecla copper district.

News Heard of in Argentine

ON THE TANGOISTS!

Funny thing about that dance they call "the Argentine tango."

There isn't any such thing in Argentine.

It's a fact! If you don't believe it, ask John W. Garrett, the United States Minister to Argentine, who is visiting in Baltimore.

He came up from Buenos Ayres chiefly to find out what "the Argentine tango" was; he has read so much about in the newspapers.

"We have no such dance in Buenos Ayres," said Mr. Garrett, "and I am curious to know what it is. One of the principal objects of my trip is to see the tango danced. It must be very fine."

Becker's Case in Court of Appeals

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 13.—The stage was set today for one of the final acts in the legal drama built about the murder of Herman Rosenthal in New York city in 1912. The State Court of Appeals to which were presented in December, 1913, the appeals of Police Lieutenant Charles Becker and the four gunmen convicted of the gambler's murder, met today and it was expected that a decision on the appeals would be handed down before it adjourned. Chief Judge William E. Werner presided.

REPORT BIG ABATEMENTS IN REVERE TAXES

Charges of discrepancies in the business transactions of the Board of Assessors of Revere last year were today investigated at a special session of the Suffolk County Grand Jury. A number of witnesses were heard. Indictments will be returned on Thursday.

It is charged that an abatement of $12,000 on ninety pieces of property in Revere was made in one day—February 28, 1913. It was done, it is claimed, by the Board of Assessors and for the purpose of influencing the election in Revere.

The Board of Assessors last year consisted of Samuel A. Segee, who was then chairman and who is now serving a year in jail for falsifying town records. The other assessors were Charles H. Bates and William H. Colcord.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell when you Darken Gray, Faded Hair with Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

FOR DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR OR ITCHY SCALP—25-CENT DANDERINE

Girls! Girls! Save your hair! Make it grow luxuriant and beautiful.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

SAYS BOSTON BLUE BLOOD IS RUNNING DRY

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Jan. 12.—Dr. C. B. Davenport said that the good old New England stock is dying out and that blue blood will soon be as scarce in Boston as blue moons, in debate with Professor Herbert A. Miller of Olivet College, at the National Conference for Race Betterment here today. The conference closed with enthusiastic sessions, in which Professor Miller struck the only discordant note.

"Eugenics," said the professor," is about as useful as a decadent bird's nest in solving the problems that are confronting humanity nowadays.

"Eugenics, despite the cockiness of the eugenists, is likely to delay progress for twenty years."

Concerning social relationships, Professor Winfield Scott Hall of Northwestern University said:

"Young people should have it very clearly set forth that the only absolute safety is not to permit the beginning of familiarity. Let the young people be taught that the embrace is society's sacred symbol of protection, and that the kiss is society's sacred symbol of affection.

"A young woman who has come to the ripe estate of twenty-one or twenty-two and has learned all the lessons about herself from a sympathetic, clear visioned mother is in a mental attitude easily to be guided in her choice of a life partner. Similarly the young man will have been taught to recognize and demand a perfect woman for a wife."

DEL VAL MADE ARCHPRIEST OF ST. PETER'S

ROME, Jan. 12.—By the appointment of Pope Pius X., who always felt the strongest esteem for his gifted secretary, the high office of archpriest of St. Peter's has been conferred upon Cardinal Merry Del Val.

This ensures to him an official residence in the grounds and an annuity of 20,000 lire, or some $4,000 a year.

This is the post which cost Cardinal Rampolla when Pope Leo XIII died. It was thought in political circles here when Rampolla passed away recently that his successor at St. Peter's would undoubtedly be Cardinal O'Connell of Boston.

It was the Pope's earnest wish that Cardinal Del Val take the exalted position, as in the event of the supreme pontiff's death his Secretary of State would thus be settled comfortably for life in a place most suited to his high attainments which would keep him permanently in influence in the centre of the church's government.

Cardinal Del Val is by reason of youth (he is just past fifty) and by equipment one of the most valuable of all the cardinals. He was born in London, during his father's service at the Court of St. James as minister from Spain. His mother is Irish, coming from an ancient family, the Merrys of Waterford.

Educated in England, at the great Jesuit College of Stonyhurst and afterwards in Paris and in Rome, he is one of the most cultured men in the church. He speaks several languages with ease and fluency and is as much at home at English as he is in the use of Spanish or Italian.

He is a man of splendid presence and the most amiable of manners. He has many times represented the Holy See as a diplomatic envoy on occasions of great observance. His outlook of future travels is that he may find time to enjoy a thorough tour of the United States and Canada, and in the progress of both he takes a deep interest.

HUERTA DECREE ADMITS MEXICO IS BANKRUPT

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 13.—Provisional President Huerta today issued a decree suspending for one year the payment of interest on all government indebtedness, both foreign and domestic, including all bonds.

All foreign governments will be notified of this action immediately. This proclamation is the most important issued by Huerta since he assumed office as he in the financial affairs of the country are concerned.

It is in effect a proclamation of national bankruptcy, and is believed to be due to the fact that all negotiations for foreign loans have failed.

Another government decree issued today provides that no one connected in any way with the late Madero administration will be allowed to leave the country without special permission, and that all persons who left Mexico recently shall be arrested.

Arrangements are in progress to have foreigners in case the capital is captured by the Constitutionalists completed today. These plans were inaugurated by a German committee, comprising British, German, French and Spanish citizens several weeks ago, and all foreigners have been registered with consulates.

General Francisco Villa, rebel leader in Northern Mexico, has decided to take a hand in restoring Mexico's credit, according to reports reaching the United States today. He is said to have made ample provision for the balance of the interest due, and made ground for capital before the final assault is launched.

Terrible hardships are reported in the caravan of Federal soldiers and camp followers and civil engineers, which is being driven by the United States troops from Presidio. The number is hitherto unknown. Already many have died, and food is scarce. More than 1,000 of the fugitives are women.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The latest trade rumor is to the effect that Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison have formed a combination to manufacture a gasoline-driven phonograph. The production of a light and reliable machine to be known as the Ford-Edison and sell at about $50 it is known that their combined fund would have been to close a deal with one of the big piano manufacturers made a proposition through New England, and if it not outside the realm of probability that while on this trip the genius of the three inventors was considered to a greater or less degree.

However, be that as it may, the rumor is so well-defined that it is being received with a great deal of credence by the trade. It is known that Edison, who is now president of the Diamond Disc, has been credited with the invention of a device by means by the electric lantern which who is more concerned in behalf of the industry than he. Mr. Fitzgerald, and the selection of Edison and Ford would just lose no time in the attention which is large.

According to advice from Indianapolis the Burmah is at work on a special racing car for Ormond in the forthcoming four-mile contest. Burman is confident that it machine he is building will be able to run a mile in 2:00 or better and will go as well or better than anything yet entered.

Ormond is also said that he is to turn out his new motor, which will be built in duplicate so that if one is wrecked in a smash-up prior to the contest. Strong efforts are being made by Indianapolis interests to induce both the National and Marmon companies, former winners of the big events, to make entry for the forthcoming contest, but it is doubtful if they will be successful, as both companies have repeatedly stated that they were through with racing for good and all.

CASSIDY WILL URGE LAW FOR PURE SAUSAGES

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Honest manufacturers of sausage are repeating their demand for a law that will protect them from adulteration with makers of fraudulent sausage. An act was presented at the last session of the Massachusetts Legislature, but was changed so much in Committee that it served no real purpose.

Cereal in sausage is an adulterant, and it is freely used. Five per cent. cereal takes up 25 per cent. water. By the use of this additional the consistency is defrauded as well as the honest dealer, no information is given the purchaser that water to the extent of one-fifth their weight has been added to the sausages.

I have been asked within a week by reputable manufacturers to urge the passage of a law that will protect the use of cereal in sausage, that will compel all sausage manufacturers to make a standard article, composed of good meat, free from preservatives, before offering under the practice of using parts of the intestines in producing sausage is regarded by honest manufacturers as unclean.

The act passed last session permits the addition of water, in amounts that will make the finished product pay, and thus legalizes the sale of adulterated sausages. The argument advanced by those who insist on using starch or flour is that it is necessary to use these to hold the meat together, and that it is not deleterious or injurious to health. Such construction of a law destroys efforts that reputable dealers are seeking, and gives others who employ these subterfuges or harmless adulterants an unfair advantage over honest manufacturers.

The time for presenting bills for legislation will expire January 15, 1914.

BALKAN WINTER ADDS TO MISERY OF BULGARIANS

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Further reports reached London today from relief agents in the Balkans which describe the appalling distress there. Tens of thousands are starving, and cold and there is most urgent need of immediate assistance.

The representative of the Balkan War Relief Committee in Sofia writes:

"There are now about 125,000 refugees in Bulgaria who have fled from Thrace and Macedonia, of these 5,000, mostly from Kirk-Kilisseh, are now in Sofia. Thirty-five thousand refugees came from Bourgas, Eastern Rumelia. They are in a most pitiable condition. An urgent appeal has been received from Albania stating that 10,000 Bulgarian refugees have reached Durazzo. It is impossible to feed or shelter them. The telegram urges the Bulgarian Government to dispatch to bring them to this country. In Sofia, Varna and other towns the government has established refuges in schools.

"All through the war I found missionaries of the American board distributing relief systematically and well. The situation now is awful. Hourgas, the people are not even under tents, but in the open air, and in the conditions are terrible.

"Many women are expecting visits from the stork, and many of the children will not live through the open fields infested by wolves."

Madame Vasilewesai writes under date of Drama, village of Salonica, December 27:

"The people are starving, living entirely on roots, especially dandelions, which they gather in the fields. Almost thirty-five cadets for a bed are in use in the military school as well as three patients."

Miss Saunders writes from Sofia, December 31:

"The mortality among babies is really high. In many places bread, almost the only food the government gives the refugees recently, has been replaced by the surplus stores of flour and of impossible bad milk and no concentrated milk for the babies. An attempt is being made to reunite the scattered families of the refugees at a common centre."

Hair Grew 4 Inches in a Few Weeks

A St. Louis Lady Increased the Length of Her Hair Four or Five Inches in a Few Weeks with This Simple Home Recipe.

A well-known St. Louis lady, after using a simple recipe at home on her hair which she mixed at home, gave the following statement: "Without exaggeration, my hair has grown four or five inches." The recipe she used is as follows, and any lady or gentleman can mix it at home. To a half-pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the tips of the fingers. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out.

It darkens streaked faded gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. These ingredients can be obtained from any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home.

IN ONE MINUTE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN—COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Stops Nasty Discharge, Clears Stuffed Head, Heals Inflamed Air Passages and You Breathe Freely.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle, anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils, and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning, the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages, stops nasty discharges, and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucus dropping into the throat, and raw dryness in distressing, but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

The wording of the Federal Income Tax was materially improved and policy-holders generally benefited by the intelligent response made to our letter to policy-holders, sent out last April. The united protest of policy-holders against unfair legislation is something that all legislatures, Federal and State, will have to reckon with in the future.

A statement consisting of 168 folio pages, giving in minute detail the transactions of the year, schedules of the Company's assets, and a vast deal of additional information, will be filed with the Department of Commerce in Washington, with the Government of each State (except one) of the United States, and with the Governments of all the leading Countries of the world. A brief of this, containing important details, will be sent to policy-holders during 1914, and will be mailed to any one on request.

FUNERAL FEES ARE TIPS, SAYS REV. DR. DOLE

Fees for marriages or funerals will not be accepted by the Rev. Charles F. Dole, D. D., pastor of the First Congregational Unitarian Church of Jamaica Plain. For sometime he has carried on this policy and believes that it is for the highest interest of the churches that the minister in his administration of church affairs be not classified with Pullman car porters or waiters.

In an interview today Dr. Dole said: "I will not accept any fees for marriages or funerals. A minister in his official character is willing to serve the community. He can do this in many ways. He makes many an address or lecture without a fee. When people come to him to be married he should be willing to do this service for the persons concerned without fee. It is his duty.

"His salary should be large enough to allow of his doing without any fees. "We must get rid of the mercenary aspect, involved in doing ministerial work. These fees are nothing less than tips. It is not the time to receive fees when a family is in sorrow. That's the time to give the best and most loyal service to the afflicted. I maintain it is not the time to receive money reward.

"I absolutely refuse to have any fees put into my hands for any service that I can render."

Police Pay Held Up at Beverly

"Nothing doing," said City Treasurer Mark A. Harris of Beverly today to the police officers and firemen who applied at City Hall for their weekly pay. This was due to the refusal by Mayor McDonald to approve committees. The city charter says the payroll shall be signed by the Committee on Accounts. In a day or two the school teachers will be looking for their pay.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—"What about anti-trust legislation?" Thomas F. Ryan was asked by a reporter. He replied:

ATTRACTIONS OF THE WEEK IN BOSTON THEATRES

BERT WILLIAMS HEADS BIG BILL AT B. F. KEITH'S

That Bert Williams pays well to make a man laugh, who has been wrong on the election.

Among the things to be seen at Keith's Theatre or in pantomime how he would look if he was dancing, or trying to dance, is Mr. Williams. He does it with all the unintentional absurdity that he would be expected to put into that kind of a performance. When there is a suggestion of how his brother Egyptians are executed. And "Woodman, Spare That Tree," and "Nobody," and the inimitable and immortal performance of poker, when ever the necessity of the stand. Mr. Williams is a most tedious welcome back to vaudeville.

Joseph Jefferson Hartman may have a clever, amusing series. "Just Old Joe," to which he and his band play, but the startling method of making one think he is dead. Mr. Jefferson is laughable in his insistence that he is no pianist.

Eight comedy tableaux under the direction of Eleanor Baldwin Cass, allow one graceful a mild man be with feeling.

Stepp, Chapman & King put on a sparkling series of piano and banjo music and singing, with plenty of comedy that goes without fail. Dogs around the house, elephants and people form a new note in Prelle's Miniature Circus.

Britt Lomb is a good old harmonica boy and gets good hands. Cleo Gascoigne, a petite young damsel, develops such a volume of sweet soprano from her small frame that one is amazed. Ward and Louie open the bill with "Lighting Express" painting, and the Great Raboni Troupe of acrobats and trick dogs with clever aerial work.

St. James Theatre.

The new program at the St. James Theatre yesterday was headed by Herbert Frank and his company in "The Monument." It was a dramatic playlet of gripping interest. A half dozen other vaudeville features were on the bill.

'ALL ABOARD' AND LEW FIELDS WIN AT SHUBERT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

While it is unquestionably true that all musical comedies are struck to a considerable extent from the same recipe, and that to the trained eye the point of difference from one to another is discovered only in the variety of titles pinned upon the musical specimens—while all this is freely conceded, it never will be admitted that Lew Fields could turn from the old and familiar paths at the Shubert last evening and gave you a brand of musical comedy of unique colors and ingredients entirely his own. If you recognize in the "All Aboard" familiar trademarks in the entertainment you may be assured were held up to your eye solely for the sake of harmony and sentiment, for in such musical comedy as was covered in "All Aboard" this is an unwanted return to the old precepts and conventions of the past.

But Mr. Fields and others you see in variety of scenes and situations. Another thing should be said, that he turned into any ensemble remarkable ability as a producer. From moving pictures to living figures, scenery, novel ensembles, and a wealth of brass and gilt ornaments are on every hand. Mr. Fields has gathered about him a New York to Spain, Holland and Switzerland, and has done it well with the assistance of Ned Wayburn, vaudeville, with Kate on the side.

With this introduction and a few remarks in general respects "All Aboard" was full of entertainment of the old-fashioned sort, with specialties and nonsense. A small boy with a voice, a Dutch comedian, a sketch called "When Women Rule," suffragette song of the new order, Mr. Fields' own act, appearing as a wronged and abandoned actor in search of his wife, and a number of other features of the evening. Joe Hayden, Gertrude Williams and Claire Rochester occupied most of the moments devoted to polite vaudeville.

Of the big chorus, it may be said that it was well displayed in several bedtime the occasion, and that is about all a chorus is used for in modern musical comedy.

Plays That Remain.

"Little Women" continues at the Majestic, where it is delighting large audiences.

"Under Cover" remains at the present time. It is one of the most interesting plays of the season.

Ethel Barrymore will continue at the Tremont this week in "Trelawney of the Wells."

May Robson, in "The Clever Woman," began her final week at the Park last evening.

"The Whip" is still at the Boston, supplying thrills to lovers of the third melodrama.

Donald Brian, in "The Marriage Market," finishes his trial at the Hollis this week.

"Traffic in Souls" is drawing to fourth houses at the Globe. It is a white slavery subject reduced to motion pictures.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" is offered upon its last few weeks at Tremont Temple entertainment.

Next Week's Bills.

John Drew will come to the Hollis next Monday in "The Will" and "The Tyranny of Tears."

Richard Bennett, in "The Argyle Case," will be the next week's attraction at the Park.

"Seven Days' Liberation" will move into the Tremont next Monday.

Harry Lauder, in "When Dreams Come True," will be the opening attraction at the Park next Monday.

"Mind the Paint" Girl" at Castle Sq.

The return of Miss Young was the chief event of the Castle Square last night. Miss Young will resume her position as leading lady of Mr. Poole's company, after an absence of eight months. She is cast as Arthur Pinero's "The Mind the Paint Girl," with Miss Young in the [illegible] part so to speak, a [illegible] character.

The play has much [illegible] but, of course, it is [illegible] to the audience [illegible] Mr. Pinero is [illegible] in many [illegible] the [illegible] certainly [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LORD'S DAY LEAGUERS URGE CHURCH DAY

Lord's Day Leaguers of New England, at their annual meeting in the Park Street Church yesterday urged Boston's Go-to-Church Day Sunday, Febru-ary 8. Secretary M. D. Knoeland of that organization said: "We are very glad to call attention to the observance of Go-to-Church Day for Boston. The habit of church-going makes a safe community. By appointing a day like this, we do not intend to limit church-going to any one day. Not at all.

"But by this means of appointing a special day, to be know as Go-to-Church Day, we are hoping to awaken the careless to the importance of church-going. On this special day appointed by the committee of Boston ministers, some may be encouraged to see something in the churches to make them join the company of those who value this habit."

The Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street Church, told how a little boy, eight years old, who had been separated from his father, wanted the latter to go to church.

"This little boy brought to the understanding of his father," said Dr. Conrad, "the importance of church-going, as was evidenced in my church yesterday. It is hoped that many such cases like this will repeat themselves on Go-to-Church Day."

On Go-to-Church Day every member of the various Sunday schools is asked to speak every day to some one about going to church. In this manner thousands may be reached.

All the churches will hold special meetings this week. The Prospect Street Congregational Church, Cambridge, with its pastor, the Rev. W. M. McNair, will plan for the day in that neighborhood.

Lung Trouble Yielded to This Medicine

If you are suffering with Lung Trouble, or if you know of some unfortunate person so afflicted, would you take the trouble to write for information of a medicine which has brought health in a large number of cases. Read below—

2023 Girard Ave., Phila., Pa.

"Gentlemen:—In the winter of 1903 I had an attack of Grippe, followed by Pneumonia, and the consequence has been ever since that I have had cough, night sweats, fever and raised quantities of purple-looking stuff and bloody matter. To make housekeeping at one time three to three successive days, both and ears become so distracted I could know nothing down. Three physicians treated me. I was ordered to the sanitarium but refused to go. Eckman's Alterative was recommended by a friend. After taking a small grass bottle I had the first quiet night's sleep for weeks. My improvement was marked from this trial. I gained strength and weight and appetite. I never had another hemorrhage and my cough gradually lessened until entirely gone. I am perfectly well."

(Affidavit) ANNIE P. LOUGHRAN.

Eckman's Alterative has been tested in many years' test to be most efficacious in severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs, sold by leading druggists. Write for booklet Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa. for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

SAVING LIVES

Never wait for a cold to wear off—it wears away the lungs instead. Father John's Medicine gives prompt relief from colds and throat and lung troubles. Free from alcohol and nerve-destroying drugs upon which many medicines depend for their temporary effect, and which are dangerous, because they weaken the body and allow the disease to get a deeper hold.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

SMITH HAS WADED THROUGH AN ENTIRE ARMY OF HEAVYWEIGHTS DURING HIS SHORT RING CAREER

JOE CHICK IS READY FOR GO WITH LOUGHREY

By JACK CONWAY.

JOE CHICK, the rugged Gloucester welterweight, will leave for Providence today to attend to unfinished business in connection with Frank Loughrey of Philadelphia, in a fifteen round go to include the Marseilles 5. It is ancient history. Chick has not had any difficulty to make the poundage and will enter the ring with his full strength.

The Gloucester boy considers the deal of interest there, as he is England one to defeat. In Rhode Island where both boxers are well known, Loughrey is one of the best ring generals in the "Little Hooligan" has annually put up a hard, pleasing fight.

Chick made his first appearance in a Rhode Island ring last month when he fought a fifteen round draw with Jimmy "Kid" Alberts. He was then matched to go over Eddie Mack's protege, but Chick forced the fighting in the majority of the rounds and there were a number of "fans" who believed that he was entitled to the decision.

THE new Rhode Island A. C. in Charleston, will hold its first show this evening. Jim Flynn, the veteran Rhode Island heavyweight, and Tim Logan, who hails from near old Philadelphia, will wage a six round bout in the feature event of fifteen rounds. Flynn is a satisfactory performer and Logan comes up to expectations he will rank among giants of action.

"PORKY" FLYNN will receive a chance to remain among the big ring laurels when he clashes with Battling Jackson in a ten round bout before the National Sporting Club of New York tonight. Flynn will outweight Levinsky by ten pounds and will be right and seek to win the latter. Therefore it looks as though the West Side heavyweight should win if he shows any kind of form.

Levinsky, however, is at his best when pitted against big, burly fellows like Flynn. He seems to relax and lower their guard and commence to mix around the ring.

CONSEQUENTLY Flynn will have to watch out in order to win. If "Porky" outmatches Levinsky, he will be the "boss" in New York, with Jess Willard's offensive interests in business affairs it would not surprise the writer if Flynn was to secure a match with "Gunboat" Smith.

A LARGE number of promising amateur boxers will compete in the A. A. A. amateur tournament. The trial contests will be staged tomorrow night while the semi-final and final bouts will be held Saturday evening.

TERRY MARTIN is doing light training. The veteran Philadelphia welterweight, who came back with a vengeance in his bout with "Young" Jasper, is hoping at a merry pace and will hurl a challenge at the winner of the bout between Jim Clark and Frank Mandell. Martin says he would like to get a match with either Phil Cross or Johnny "Kid" Alberts.

THE writer received a letter today from Alex McLean, who is in Salt Lake City, Utah, in the West with Gilbert Gallant, who meets "One Round" Hogan in a twenty round bout in Salt Lake City Friday. Alex says Gallant is in perfect condition and confident of winning.

Chicago Golfers Are Against U. S. G. A.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—The managers of the Homewood Country Club of this city are peeved because they say was "legislated" out of the semi-finals or holding the championship tournament. Consequently they will begin at once a campaign to limit the power of the governing committee of the United States Golf Association in awarding tournaments.

Things to Think About—XII.

(Prize Ring Records)

WE know of no more pleasant mental exercise than doping out the winner of an impending prize fight by looking up the past performances of the impending principals. But, too frequently, those who do not use their minds as much as they should go to the length of pasting the outer article of the back roll and proceeding at a noise clean to lose the need his mind in such a manner that, while he knows not how the previous battles have resulted, he is full of information on the more important point of which battler is going to win this one.

* * *

THE past performances of prize-fighters form as uncertain a base of footing for one to rely upon as previous races of that grand old breed of horses that were used to run in the Sport of Kings for sol Lichtenstein and other rattled patronizers. The parallel is exact. A few men, as a rule, know how most horse-races are going to finish, and an equally small number have the result of an important prize-fight before the fighters get on the scales.

* * *

TAKE, for example, the case of Packey McFarland, who has amassed a comfortable fortune and has up until recently a reputation for being as nearly honest as it is possible with his profession. The eye of suspicion was never turned upon him when he became a candidate for the Illinois state Senate. Why, when the thought would an honest man want to be a state Senator in Illinois? Immediately thereafter his manager put on the witness stand to tell what interest he had in himself. Also, Willard, after being a prize-fighter, and friendly examined that point of his modern to the prize-fight game paid any attention to knockouts in a basement record. As we don't like to stare you up against mental efforts that will not profit you, we would love to keep you informed on coming battles, but we have never been able to get on the inside ourselves. We're afraid we always come, though, and you are welcome to our system. It is our custom to take it on the nose to suggest some reckless rogue and his bets added. Mr. Ford, we bet him $0.25 on each fighter who operates from the opposite corner to the course of the exercise. We are now six bits ahead, with the Writer only half over, but we are unusually lucky, being among the few who didn't take the trip to Reno to see Jack Johnson squash Mr. Jeffries.

EDBETS WILL SEND CONTRACT TO JOE TINKER

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Notwithstanding Jan Tinker's intention not to play organized baseball this year, as evidenced by his signing a contract to manage the Chicago Federal League team, Charles H. Ebbetts of the Brooklyn National League Club says he will mail Tinker a contract to sign, nevertheless. "It is no opinion," said Ebbetts, "as long as Tinker is willing to stay over the Federals in connection with the Federals before applying for an injunction.

"The National League is naturally going to protect itself against the invasion of Joe Tinker, but what good would it do? Indeed, I am not prepared to discuss."

Herzog to Start Ball School for Amateurs

CINCINNATI, Jan. 13. — Charley Herzog, the new manager of the Reds, is planning a brand new American baseball stunt, a training school for new baseball recruits aspiring to honors on the professional diamonds. Herzog will invite youngsters to report at Redland field each morning the Reds are at home and they will be allowed to mingle and practice with the Red team with the view of either later being signed with the Reds or minor baseball teams. Herzog feels certain of landing some "stars" this way. He points to the case of Jack Barry, discovered by Connie Mack on the Baltimore baseball lots.

"It's all in the pocket"—new idea in collar construction found exclusively in the "Looscarf"—the only collar with a real worth-while feature that makes it different from all others. Two Cubs Are Placed Beyond Reach of Feds

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 13.—Two of the Chicago National League baseball stars whom Federal League agents have been trying to induce to jump to the new league have been placed beyond the reach of the Insurgents. Manager Johnny Evers, of the Cubs, came to Pittsburgh and met Burt Humphries, the pitcher, who resides at California, Pa., and after a short conference Humphries signed a Club contract. While here, Evers received a telegram from President Charles W. Murphy, announcing that First Baseman Vic Saier also had agreed to play with the Cubs again.

NO HOPES ARE LEFT TO FIGHT WITH 'GUNBOAT'

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13.—There seems to be nothing left for Gunboat Smith but the footlights.

He has defeated the entire army of White hopes and has, in addition, gained a decision over Sam Langford, who for years had been a terror to big men of all complexions.

He has reached a stage where there are but two matches in sight for him, which do not savor of repetition, to wit: One with Georges Carpentier and the other with Jack Johnson.

Word comes that Carpentier is going to Australia and that Johnson has placed Gunboat on the deferred list.

Under the circumstances, all that remains for Smith is to accept whatever theatrical engagements have been offered him, invest in a natty stage costume and start pounding the bag to slow music.

That will add a lot of snap to his appearance by challenging Johnson nightly.

Jack Johnson, talking with his arm in splints over in Paris, says it will be quite a while before he gets around to fighting about Smith. The first of the Johnson matches will be with Frank Moran, whom Smith defeated in San Francisco.

This will take place in June, and if Johnson is to be believed he is guaranteed $35,000 for his services on that occasion.

But there's the rub. Is Johnson to be believed?

It's only a few weeks ago that reports from Paris had Johnson so low in finances and so bereft of drawing power that he was showing nightly with a traveling circus that did not take in as much as $200 per show.

Then came the news that Johnson had made up his mind to fight again and had arranged a match with Fatting Johnson, another negro.

Maranville Satisfied, Will Stick to Braves

Walter Maranville, the brilliant little shortstop of the Braves, has assured Secretary Herman Nickerson that he will play nowhere but in Boston next season. "I'll be out there next year in the short field and show you something," said the "Rabbit."

Maranville expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with his treatment by President James E. Gaffney, and said that he would rather play with Boston than any other club in the country.

NEW BASEBALL ORGANIZATION HAS MADE ITSELF LOOK QUITE DANGEROUS IN SINGLE MONTH

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

HOCKEY FOLLOWERS GET FIRST CHANCE IN TWO YEARS TO SEE GAMP BETWEEN LOCAL TEAMS

FEDERALS ARE FEARED BY THE BIG LEAGUERS

By FRANK G. MENKE.

Comparing the baseball situation today with that of December 12 last forces one to the conclusion that one month's time certainly can bring about considerable shifting in the scale affect of things.

Just thirty days ago the organized baseball crowd was in high glee over the fact that the National League had inveigled a real sure-enough Governor to become its leader. Charles "Hollday" Ebbets, boss of the Brooklyns, was jubilant over the acquisition of Shortstop Joe Tinker. Ban Johnson and his American League colleagues were happy because all signs pointed to 1914 as the banner year in baseball.

Not a fly zipped his way around in the organized crowd's ointment. All was calm, serene, placid and lovely. And then, presto, change!

In rode one James Gilmore, a heifer in such a sordid commodity as coal. Flinking 25c were two of the seven most of their lives could command in Chicago, a fish dinner, an extra man, two ice cream and a couple of other big items drawn from similar elongated trades.

BANK ROLL BEST WEAPON.

This strange looking army, waving aloft the rapers of the so-called outlaw Federal league, chortled like organized persons vamp with the daring coal dealer leading the assault, ring in weapons a thick bank roll, a fondness for red and a bunch of blank warrants.

Were the organized persons worried? Did they show fear? Sir. They just yawned a bit, gave the corraling gang the "once over" and then murmured "bloom-bloom" and went back to sleep and to dream peaceful dreams concerning large profits in 1914.

What that Federal League has accomplished in one short month is marvelous, no matter from what angle you view it, a dyed-in-the-wool fan on the strongly entrenched Organized Crowd they startled the baseball world. There were eight clubs with a man outside of the Federal League clique that would have wagered on Pittsburgh, Buffalo or the Federals' chances of accomplishing anything but their own ruin.

Yet not less than a month they have harpooned a half-dozen of the stars of the National and American Leagues, and are dickering—with fine chances for success—with at least a score more of the best known players on the roster of organized baseball. They have soared from an obscure organization, almost unknown outside of the cities in which they played last season, to a mighty power in baseball.

SECURE GOOD GROUNDS.

The Federals have secured good grounds in central locations in cities where they have placed clubs. They are at work building grandstands. And they have a certain portion of the public with them—that portion of the public that likes the little fellow when he goes up to game, winning fight against his larger, stronger opponent.

Because it is a new organization, because it has not a large number of well-known stars, the Federal League next season cannot expect to roam a golden harvest. But from the way things look now those Federal League magnates will clear expenses in 1914. And that's about all they hope to do.

It is a certainty that when they open the season in the different cities this spring they will have packed stands. The curious public is agnecite whetted by the months of Winter lingering will want to see what the Federals have.

Perhaps the Federals can show a few surprises. Perhaps there are in the ranks of the Federals some ball players larger than of before outside of the Federal League circuit, who are almost as unknown as some of the stars in the American and National League ranks.

If they have, it will mean that in 1915 the Federal Leaguers can cease trying to coax stars from the organized stars and can lure the public to its parks on the strength of their own baseball workers.

SKATING AFTER GAME—ALSO SUNDAYS

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS
By A.H.C. Mitchell

THE really ludicrous incidents of the Federal League activities are taking place in Chicago. The Feds evidently have Charles Webb Murphy, owner of the Cubs, on the hot griddle. Murphy is treating long strides against the Federal League and warnings to his players against the "outlaws." On the average he turns out about three columns of stuff daily, about 1 per cent. of which gets into print. Everybody in Chicago seems to be taking considerable enjoyment in seeing Murphy squirm.

THE Chicago baseball reporters, who seem to be having their share of the fun, told Tinker what Murphy said about him the other day whereupon Tinker came back with the assertion that Murphy had tampered with Tinker when he was the property of another National League club. This is an offense punishable with a fine of $1,000, according to the doctrines of the National League.

HERE is what took place when Tinker was informed by newspaper men of Murphy's remark. "Did he say that?" queried Joe.

"Well, if he did, what about the magnates who sold me for $22,000, the back, and who why he cut short his European trip and rushed back to New York in time to be on the last day of the National League meeting. He had been cabled that I was on the market."

"ALSO," continued Tinker, "was him if he called me by telephone and what he said to me after he returned to Chicago and found that Herrmann had completed the Brooklyn deal. He told me not to overlook the fact that he had given Roger Bresnahan $10,000 to sign a sub-contract and that he still has a little money. He didn't want it known that he communicated with me in any way, because it is contrary to the rules for a player to even then the property of the Brooklyn club and he had no right to negotiate for me. Garry Herrmann Ebbets even warned him against it."

AFTER ridding himself of the tirade against the cuts boss Tinker went down to play ball. However he did at Cincinnati, he had the best year in baseball since coming to the majors. He batted .265 in 151 games record of .215 at bat and the leading position in the field of shortstop to prove that—well, you all know that the National League circuit is not to dry territory.)

IT'S a tough job that faces the new leagues to put the Feds down. The Feds have to overcome the following obstacles to get a footing as compared with the American League: 1—A far less pretentious circuit, not costing more for transportation.

2—That pay double, triple and quadruple the salaries to get players to jump.

3—Just solicit patronage from a public not hostile to the major leagues.

4—Must build expensive stands to expect fans to patronize them. In 1909 the day of the concrete structure was not here.

5—The Feds have no organized and fighter like Ban Johnson.

6—Had four leagues to fight, not one.

DOUBTLESS one reason why the Feds are confining their attention to National League players is because as a rule they are much the best known of the American Leaguers. For example, when the Cubs had the best outfield in the country in Schulte, Hofman and Sheckard, the trio can pull a total of 19,500. Compare this sum with $9,000 that Speaker alone drew from the Red Sox last year.

NAP RUCKER, the best southpaw in the National League and by some said to be the best left-handed pitcher in the world, never drew more than $3,500 a season from the Brooklyn club. This sum is ridiculous compared with salaries that even second-rate pitchers receive from other clubs.

Once upon a time we heard of a fourteen stranger who was not a champion at something or somewhere.

One of Gunboat Smith's stage stunts will be to deliver a monologue explaining how he became a white hope. But it should be called a coal.

Having elected Jess Tate the Federals are not after Ban Fite. They are afraid of being prosecuted for operating the trust market.

Occasionally we hear of a ball player who has been doing well at his job as manager of the Pittsburgh Federals. Just think.

If the South Johnson battle are really played prone to Hughie it will only reinforce the hard-boiled theory of the grunger and the screamers.

NEW RULE TO DEFINE TENNIS 'SIMON PURE'

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The proposed rule by which it is expected to clearly define the lawn tennis amateur in this country has been issued by the National Lawn Tennis Association. It is understood to conform sufficiently with the rules of the International Federation of Europe so as to cause no friction as to Davis cup matches of the future.

The rule will be offered for adoption at the annual meeting of the national body at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York, on February 5.

The proposed rule follows:

"An amateur lawn tennis player is one who has not accepted money or travelling or living expenses for playing the game in a tournament, match or competition; but a player may accept hospitality at a private house, and, when officially selected to represent an association or club in a world's championship or in a national, sectional or State championship held under the auspices of the U. S. L. T. A., or in a representative team competition, a player may receive from such association or club his necessary travelling and reasonable living expenses. The interpretation of this rule shall not prevent a player from taking advantage of any reasonable special living or transportation rates which are generally announced and are open to all players entering the tournament.

GREATER LOVE

True Story of Boston's Little Lost Sister Who Found Herself

By JANET WRIGHT

CHAPTER XIV.

Continued

They brushed past me—and my woman's curiosity, more than any real thought that I might be of help, prompted me to close the front door and follow them up the stair.

Little Charlie—then only about six months old, was in convulsions when we entered that upper room. And I shall never forget the scene that followed.

Patience Wiggins—calm and cool as ever, was busy with every device at hand, attempting to quiet the tortured baby. It was she who stood at the doctors side and helped him, and even to one who knew her in a way as I did, it was hard to see the terrible agitation which she was controlling.

The doctor was not in the secret of the baby's parentage. He supposed Patience was the child's real mother. Marjorie—the child's real mother, was this excited, quivering, nervous old—though she was longing to do something—anything—to ease her baby's pain.

She was kneeling at the foot of the couch upon which the baby was laid. Her body was shaking in terrible tremors that seemed to start in some far recess of her being. Her hand clutched the foot of the couch. The other, doubled into a white-knuckled fist, was pressed against her white lips as though by sheer physical force she would press back the torrent of grief and longing that was fighting to be born.

PASSION HOOK GIRL

This is something I suppose few men understand—the passion that shook the girl at that moment. I was a mother myself—and I could feel her. Yes other mothers can guess how she must have suffered at being thus forbidden even to claim her own child. Yet the most powerful of forces compelled her silence, for it had been made plain to her that for the sake of the baby's future, it must be known as Captain Wiggins' own child, and not as an adopted daughter. For the sake of this future, she was forced to forego all the rights of motherhood—while the twisted little body that was so dear to her writhed and clenched in pain.

I do not know how long it was that the convulsions passed. I know that at the end, when Marjorie had fallen forward upon the couch, and Patience had taken the baby in her arms, I looked about me to see that the servants were calmly setting the table for breakfast, and to see Captain Wiggins, who stood with fear in the hall, that he might not see the shocking thing that was taking place in his absence.

At last the child was quiet. Patience turned to me. "I suppose you had better go now," she said reassuringly. "Marjorie's anguish has worn her out. A glad eye brought this terrible attack upon her. Captain Wiggins, and I, discovered later the poison had left her."

STRAIN TERRIFIC

The strain seen at all had been terrific. Evidently Marjorie lifted her head and saw that the door was ajar. Silently she crept to it, and stumbled out of the room as she heard her go into her own room and the hall. I looked at Patience and this woman, who now showed the first sign of weakness, turned impulsively to her husband's arms and to me.

"Please go to Marjorie, Mrs. Wright," I saw her from the husband's breast as I left them.

* * *

I found the girl sobbing on her bed. "Oh, my baby! my baby!" she cried, "she was crying, over and over, and I thought of words and songs that now, me, me came into my arms and cried her grief out on my shoulders. "Oh, she used to be so good, my baby isn't going to die—is she?" she asked, when I removed her, she demanded.

"You can think it and let her die and not put up a struggle?"

I tried to quiet her. "It's all right dear, it's all right," I murmured silly, inadequate words, yet I could think of nothing better to say.

She went on: "If she is going to die, it will be in my arms. I will tear my way to her regardless of them and I could not endure another moment of life."

* * *

Three weeks later Patience came to me with news that the girl had gone, taking the baby with her. Patience for the first time in my recollection, showed open sorrow. "Mrs. Wiggins, she said, was a broken man."

My sympathies could not but be with the girl—with Marjorie. I knew Mrs. Wiggins and her prosecutor—for frankly the girl was guilty of deception, in the end it was decided that this these four lives took their separate paths.

It was the woman in bringing the child in her home sought vengeance upon the girl and upon the father—and she got it. Captain Wiggins died swiftly thereafter, and he never saw the baby again. Marjorie, I learned a year later, had established herself and was on the road to happiness.

As for Patience Wiggins—I saw her a month ago, and she is the same quiet, self-contained, cool woman.

CHAPTER XV.

THE "MOVIES"

The moving pictures houses are a most desirable institution.

The writer is very much interested in the moving picture houses and has no doubt admirable motives.

But it has been my experience that some of these have a demoralizing effect, not only upon those boys and girls who have ambition to present vaudeville acts upon the "movie" stage, but also to the boys and girls who go to the shows.

The darkened auditoriums, the narrow, crowded seats, and the peculiar conditions of many of them combine to make for danger. And for the unfortunate young girls who, during school days, delight in dancing and singing in the "between-the-films" vaudeville, are inspired with a desire, to "get on the stage." Once on the stage, no warning can be made too strong.

The road to stage success is not through the cheap moving picture houses, but a much darker road lies that way.

No doubt some people who have read these stories have thought me "funny how they always seem to come out all right in the end." I ought to explain that, so far as it is possible, I have tried to pick and choose those cases in which some happy turn of fate has helped to straighten the tangle of the girl's life. To this extent the cases I have presented are exceptional—for at least half of the girls whom I have tried to help have gone their own way, in spite of my best efforts in this particular case, however—the case of Madge Slocum—I was able to save a girl from going wrong and when I last heard from her a year after the incident I am about to tell, she had given up all thought of the "stage," and was at work in a department store.

MADGE ONLY SIXTEEN

Madge was only sixteen at this time. Her mother was a widow and worked as cashier in a restaurant—a task which kept her away from home in the evenings. I want to say what I have said before—if the mothers are going to force upon us which should, under no circumstances, be permitted—wage earning responsible for Madge's loneliness, and it was because of this loneliness that her thoughts turned toward other interests.

Madge had two girl friends—each a little older than herself, and the three of them often went to the motion picture houses in the evenings. The other girls were sophisticated, and Madge under their tutelage began to pick up the jargon of the streets, and the hard assurance which mirrors the street girl. She knew the dangers she ran, yet had the instinct—and the wit—to avoid them.

Yet she was drifting, drifting—all but for the almost-tragedy of this experience would undoubtedly have slipped over the edge in the end.

It was one of the older girls who made the suggestion that led to Madge's adventure. One night as they were separating at Madge's door, she suggested:

"Say, girls—why couldn't we do them song and dance stunts in the movies? We would make something out of it."

PRODUCED A CLIPPING

The other girl took up the idea readily:

"You said something, Sally," she agreed. "That's a cinch if we could get a start at it."

"I wonder how they do get started," pursued the first girl—Madge an eager listener. None of them knew—and with this first suggestion the matter dropped for the time.

But it happened that two days after the one called Sally happened to read a morning paper and at their evening revels she produced a clipping from the advertising columns. It read:

"MAKE BIG MONEY.—Tremendous demand for vaudeville performers in the 'movies'. I place you in positions. Charles G——, No. 123456789 Freeport street."

Sally read this clipping aloud to them; and Madge and the other girl gleefully began to plan with her their visit to the booking agent.

All this happened one August. There was no school to make demands upon their time; and Madge's mother was away most of the day. The other two girls were working spasmodically, but were free on Saturday afternoons, and on the following Saturday, the three of them went to Charles G—" and asked to be "placed in paying positions" according to the terms of his advertisement.

"Charles G——" was a sallow young man with a jaw that looked as though it had pulled slightly and ran, in the heat of some warm day. He looked them over cordially, and asked "What sort of a start you ask."

PLANNED "SISTER ACT."

Sally and Madge had planned a "sister act"—singing and dancing of a crude sort. They had no other ability than that picked up by chance; but they were supremely confident. The other girl had decided to do a "trick in black face," which she thought was funny, but which depended for comedy upon a mucking that persisted in coming down and having to be pulled up into place again.

"Good stuff," commented Charles, when they had told their wares before him. He took down the receiver of his telephone and described them in complimentary terms to some one who presently came on the wire. After which he told them to come to him the following Monday, when he would place them at once.

* * *

To "come on Monday" presented difficulties; since the two older girls were presumably working from 8:30 to 6 daily. For Madge it was simple. She merely told her mother she was home from 10 in the morning till 10 at night. The two other girls managed it by "playing sick"; for they were sufficiently canny to know it would be unwise for them to give up their work till a new place waited for them. Madge on her part explained her contemplated absences—which of course would extend till after her mother was expected home—by telephoning the restaurant that Sally's mother was sick and that Sally wanted her to "stay all night." The mother consented readily enough, and thus the three girls were free to present themselves at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at the office of "Charles G——."

GIRLS ARE HIRED

A man was waiting in the office—a man of perhaps thirty-five, with pockets under his eyes and a bald head upon which veins wriggled their way back and forth beneath the parchment-like skin. Madge was afraid of him; but the other two laughed and were friends two minutes after Charles had performed the "placed in paying positions" according to the terms of his advertisement.

Madge was afraid of him; but the other two laughed and were friends two minutes after Charles had performed simple introductions. The second man was named Mapes, and he, they were told, was manager of a chain of motion picture houses, and would take them on.

"You show tonight in Nashua," Mapes added, in confirmation.

The three looked at each other in some consternation. "What, I'ye think we are—millionaires? How do we get there?" Sally demanded, scornfully. Mapes grinned and Charles G—— laughed uproariously.

"Oh, we pay all expenses," Mapes explained. "All you have to do is to furnish the costumes and do your stunts. You get a dollar apiece besides."

Fifteen minutes they were on their way to the North Station and the train for Nashua. Madge, in whom cold fear was damping her first enthusiasm, wanted to turn back, but she dared not do so in the face of her companions, who were obviously having an even better time than they anticipated. So in silence that was ignored by the seasoned veterans of them—joined in their laughing chatter on the long train ride and flirted with the manager, Mapes, as recklessly as any of them. They found themselves members of a party that included two boy dancers and five other girls. No one of them—Madge told me—seemed more than twenty years old. She herself was sixteen.

"ANYTHING GOES"

When they arrived at Nashua Mapes took the entire party to a cheap hotel, where they had supper. Afterwards he led the way to the little theatre, where the two dressing rooms, each barely large enough for two persons, were divided between the girls and boys—the two boys in one room, the eight girls in the other. Between the two rooms passed ribald jokes and laughing lines that seemed very funny to everyone but Madge, who was feeling more afraid as every minute passed.

Just as the show commenced, Mapes appeared and urged cheerily:

"Now go to it, everybody. Go as far as you like, you girls. Anything goes in Nashua, you know."

Madge was billed for a place near the middle of the program. As the show commenced she sought out Mapes and said timidly:

"Mr. Mapes, I think I'll go back to Boston after my song."

"Oh, all right," he agreed, readily enough. "Don't hurry away."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

This serial is written in the form of the life story of a society girl who fell victim to conditions in Boston. The names used are all fictitious, but no character appears in the serial that is not taken from real life. No important incident occurs which has not actually happened in Boston within five years. And the conditions portrayed are diminished rather than exaggerated.

The serial is offered as a picture of the lives of Boston's Little Lost Sisters. It is designed to shed some light on causes underlying the terrible conditions of the city; and it is hoped some remedies may be suggested.

The facts upon which the serial is based were given to the AMERICAN by one of Boston's best informed social workers, who vouches for every statement. The serial is in the form of the life story of JANET WRIGHT—one of the Little Lost Sisters who found herself—and is told by herself.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I WAS reading in the paper yesterday, sed Ma, ware Mister Lampton, the poet, made a lot of fun of Mister Andrew Lang for having rote a poem that dident have any meening to it. It think it was a very fine poem, & I am sorry Mister Lampton made fun of it.

I was reeding that, too, sed Pa, but I think Mr. Lampton was right. What gits me, sed Pa, is the amount of poetry that lots of boheemian peepul with long hair thinks is fine poetry, & most of it is in the magaseens, too, Pa sed. You dosnt hardly ever see any of that meeningless junk in the newspaper, except in the littel country paipers ware the relatives rite poems about sum poor sucker that is ded & gone. Relatives are nevver noted for doing much good for you, sed Pa, but it always seemed to me that was the worst thing a relativ cud do—to rite a poem after you was ded that sed—The gates above were opened wide, Our throtes with grief was choked; We prayed that Hank might pass inside Them perly gates so grand & wide.

When he had orraked

The trubbel with a lot of you men, sed Ma, is that yure natures are not sweet & sensitiv enuff to understand & enjoy poetry. You can understand baseball poetry all rite, tho.

The bal shot downward like a streak & hit Hans Wagner on the beak.

You can understand that stuff all rite, sed Ma, but how many of you men can understand such a butiful little passage as this, that I jest clipped out of a magazine? Lissen: Fairies abundant trip and turn Where pansy blossoms languorously yearn

For wine-wet kisses, rosy mouth to mouth,
& overhed the glory of the South
Sighs of Afredity, swoons of bliss,
& Spring, eternal spring, and you to kiss.

That is the kind of a poem that you men are too gross to understand sed Ma. Such exquisit poetry was written for deeper, finer natures than the natures of men, sed Ma. It is the femenality of a woman or a innocent child that can see the holy vizion lites. You can't see anything in them, can you?

No, sed Pa, I rite as well be the rest. I dosn't think that if I had a glass I cud see anything to them with that.

But littel Bobbie here can understand them perfeckly, sed Ma. Can't you, Bobbie.

Oh, yes, indeed, I tould Ma, I think that they are butiful lines, full of butiful meening, etc. I cud die reading that kind of poetry, I tould Ma.

Then Ma gave me a quarter & called me her brite littel cherub. Ma didnt know it, but I knew that she didnt get them lines out of a magazine at all. I seen her when she was riteing them. Ma got a book last week that sed How to Be a Poet and I seen her studying it. I am going to say sumthing nice about every poem that she rites. NO. 6—A HUSBAND OR A JOB

By ADA PATTERSON

Y[illegible] have [illegible] of marriage [illegible] trying to [illegible] it "the matter" [illegible] your ambition [illegible]

You are trying to [illegible] only succeed in [illegible] and you may [illegible] Women have [illegible] to her life but none of them [illegible] not as rich [illegible] as [illegible] is the choice between a good [illegible] life. Marriage is no longer [illegible] the sole destiny of woman. [illegible] women have vindicated [illegible] existence independent of the [illegible] ting. Clara Barton, Florence Nightingale, Maria Mitchell, Susan B. Anthony and Sweet Susie Smith of New Orleans have lived and died [illegible] benefit of their lives is humanity [illegible] incalculable. It is no longer [illegible] to marry because everyone else is doing so. One of every [illegible] and women now pass through life alone in state if not in spirit.

NOT NECESSARY

It is no longer necessary for a girl to marry to maintain herself. The social conscience, growing more sensitive, records as such disposal of a woman's life. And it, if not [illegible] possible for a woman to earn her own living and to save enough to provide for her rainy and her ineffable days.

There is only one reason for a girl to marry. That is that life can be neither happy nor complete without that particular man in whom her interest is centred, and of that she should be very sure. And if you are sure then wait, working meanwhile, to be yet more sure, to make your sureness tenfold sure.

If you are in any doubt whatever, that doubt argues that you are not deeply in love. Enter not that love as well as the mana dearia by waiting for a year at least. If you are less than [illegible] make it four years.

To marry a man who deserves to be called manly—that is the most exalted adjective you can fit to a man—is the greatest good fortune that can come to most women. A manly man will be a faithful husband, a tender companion, a congenial comrade and a comforting windshield when your life [illegible] carries you through its black [illegible] and cold places of life. To be the wife of such a man is to approach as nearly to perfect happiness as the conditions of earth permit.

But men aren't all manly. Many of them are only [illegible] don't mistake swagger for stability, nor bravado for bravery, nor ardor for constancy, nor the knack of paying compliments for the fine art of standing by when the weather, domestic or otherwise, is bad.

Nor does the habit of telling one what he can do or intends to do [illegible] the art of doing. A man may [illegible] largely and realize contemptibly on any plan to become a millionaire, and end in the almshouse. The [illegible] ling man is likely to be more of a [illegible]

THE "JOB"

Now for the [illegible] what girls who earn more than $10 a week prefer to be a "career." If you have found [illegible] work, it will never disappoint [illegible] Its rewards may not equal your [illegible] but work itself, if it be [illegible] work, will supply all the meaning [illegible] of your life. The work and your [illegible] on it are a certain quantity, [illegible] and your love for him [illegible]

If you make a mistake in your [illegible] may become the eighth [illegible] one who has gone in the direction to help her out of a mess [illegible] of her affairs. It is better to be the fifth girl, who earns her living, than the eighth woman who, when she [illegible] the rules of [illegible] she had reared with tenderness if not wisdom and hoped would [illegible] for life.

I know a woman who worked nine months a year and spent three months in her western home. She found that vacation [illegible] her vision. It gave her perspective. It made her see things as they were, not as she wished them to be, or dreamed of their being. When a man asked her to marry him she said: I will tell you after I get back from my vacation." During that vacation she looked at her suitor through long distance glasses. Propinquity no longer played its tricks with her fancy.

CLEAR YOUR VISION

Keeping at work will do the same for you. It will clear your vision. It will enable you to study your suitor from a point of advantage of an independent working woman. He may not wait, you say. Then he isn't of the manly stuff of which good husbands are made. If while you are working and working he falls below matrimonial par—which is manliness—the work remains, and the work is the greatest consoler this kind side of death.

A good job is better than a bad husband, and to be sure you are not choosing a bad husband in the lot- [illegible] work wisely and well.

Had It Softened.

An [illegible] was one day engaged as [illegible] on the roadside, and [illegible] being used to the work could not get on very fast. A friend of his who chanced to pass by as Pat was belaboring a large stone with renewed vigor tried to show him the right way, and taking the hammer from him broke the stone with ease.

"Ah, Pat," [illegible] "Sure, now, and it be easy for ye to break the stone after I have been softening it for the last half hour."

What Is It?

The usual cup of coffee contains about 2½ grains of caffeine, a drug which often produces aches, ails and discomfort; but the habit can be quickly overcome by using well-made Postum.

One of the most pleasing features of this change from coffee to Postum is the total absence of a sense of something missed.

But more important is that "good all over" feeling of returning health; and it's the finest tactic possible to quit coffee and get well.

Postum, made of prime wheat and a small per cent. of New Orleans molasses, is a pure food-drink. It is wholesome and nourishing; and has a delicious, snappy flavor resembling that of Old Gov't Java, but is entirely free from the coffee drug, caffeine.

Anyone can make a stand for the old-fashioned fun that comes with health and the power to "do things." Suppose you try it!

"There's a Reason" for POSTUM

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled 15 to 20 minutes.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A scant teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water dissolves instantly.

The convenience of Instant Postum is apparent. But, when prepared according to directions, both kinds are exactly the same. The cost per cup is about equal.

—Grocers everywhere sell both kinds.

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

If You Did Not See Opening Instalments Read This First

MARY O'NEILL begins her story by telling of her father, born in Ellan, the son of peasants, who goes to America, become rich, and has then returned to his birthplace where he married the daughter of Captain O'Neill, of the O'Neills, and had changed his name from Daniel Neale to Daniel O'Neill. She tells of her own birth and of her father's disappointment for if a boy had been born he would have been Lord Ros by right of his mother.

She tells of Father Dan, the priest, and of her mother, an invalid from her earliest years, and of her Aunt Bridget, who came to keep house for Daniel O'Neill and brought with her her daughter and her stepdaughter. Her aunt soon came to rule the house and to domineer over Mary and her mother and to make them both very unhappy.

Her closest friend is the son of Dr. Conrad, a boy named Martin, whose greatest delight is to ride he on explore.

One day Mary and Martin go "exploring" in a boat and find it a prize. They boat floats away and late at night they are found, almost starved, on rocks off shore. It is denied, against her mother's protests, to send Mary to a convent in Rome. She travels in care of Father Dan, the priest, and on the journey she meets young Lord Ros. He tries to kiss her and she strikes him in the face but finally, at the intercession of Father Dan, she forgives him her life.

At the convent she is put in charge of Sister Angela and makes a friend of a girl named Mildred Bankes. She greatly admires an American girl named Alma, but one day her idol makes fun of her and her heart is nearly broken.

Alma, however, finds that she is one of the O'Neills of Ellan and tells her that she will be her friend.

Mary stays at the convent during the holidays. On the return of the other pupils she innocently tells Alma of some things which have happened, of which Alma gives her own version to the Reverend Mother, as a result of which Sister Angela leaves and Alma is taken away by her mother.

Two years and a half pass away and Mary is preparing for her first communion when she is suddenly called home to see her mother die on Easter eve.

Eighteenth Chapter.

AFTER my mother's death there was no place left for me in my father's house.

Betsy Beauty (who was now called Miss Betsy and gave herself more than ever the airs of the daughter of the family) came in my place with the governess who had been engaged to teach her, and the other half in driving, dressed in beautiful clothes, to the houses of gentry round about.

Nessy MacLeod, called the young person, had been promoted to be secretary, and spent most of her time in his private room, a privilege which enlarged her pride and improving her manners.

Martin Conrad I did not see, for in revenge for some unseemly act which the doctor had allowed him to spend his school holidays with us, but once to look at Nansen's ship, the Fram, which had just then arrived in the Thames.

Hence it happened that though home made a certain tug at me, with its familiar sights and sounds and more than once I turned with timid steps towards my father's busy room, intending to say, "Please, father, don't send me back to school," I made no demur when, six or seven days after the funeral, Aunt Bridget began to prepare for my departure.

"There's odds of women," said Tommy the Mate, when he went into the garden to say good-bye to him. "They're like sheep's broth, is women. If there's a bird and a beast in them they're good, and if there isn't you might as well be supping hot water. Our Biz Vivie's a hot water—but she'll die for all."

Within a fortnight I was back in the Convent, and Sister the Reverend Mother atoned to me for every neglect.

"I knew you would come back to me," she said, and from that hour onward she seemed to be trying to last ... I became deeply devoted to her. As a result of my mother's death I was left with very little by which the religious side of my life was affected. At first I found the change very hard. I had been left to follow my own impulses in my religious exercises, and the Reverend Mother took me in her own hands and made me go through a course of cleansing and the most irksome exercises of the mind.

For a long time I was in doubt as to the distinct line of religious duty in my mind. My father never sent for me, and as often as the Christmas holidays round the Reverend Mother took me with her to her country home at Neuilly.

YEARS GO BY.

That was a beautiful place—a sweet, white cottage, some twenty kilometers from Rome, at the foot of Monte Cavo, in the middle of the remains of a mediæval village which contained a castle and a monastery, and had a little blue lake lying like an emerald among the green and red of the grass and poppies in the valley below.

In the hot months of Summer the place was like a Paradise to me, with its rose growths all over the house, its green Ararats running on the rocks; its goats, its sheep; its vineyards, its bread-fruit boys in their long smocks, which seemed to girdle the heavens with quivering shafts of gold and silver, and its gleesome girls in short red petticoats and gorgeous colored shirts with their hair in long waving

Do You Want to Be a Chicken Farmer? Success Is Not Easy

Some Wisdom from Frank Tilford—and Some Suggestions from This Newspaper

Eliminate some of the few that are rich, and almost every human being sooner or later wishes that he were a chicken farmer.

Life in the city, where you rarely see the sun, moon, stars, sunset or sunrise, is monotonous.

The country, its quiet independence, and chickens laying eggs make up the dream of many a weary soul.

And many a weary soul TRIES CHICKEN FARMING, AND WAKES UP FROM THE DREAM AS FROM A DREADFUL NIGHTMARE.

However, the earth WILL support human beings. It is NOT necessary that men should swarm in cities like rats in a cellar.

And sooner or later the common sense and patience of the individual plus co-operation and special teaching will make it possible to get away from hard pavements, hideous streets, and live and EARN A LIVING in the country, where life is worth while.

Our readers with chicken farm dreams will be interested in the chicken farming enterprise of Frank Tilford of New York—a man who has the money to do a thing thoroughly, and the business ability to do it successfully.

Mr. Tilford, who has not failed in anything thus far, has already made of his chicken farm, near Lakewood, N. J., the greatest thing of the kind in the East. Thousands upon thousands of hens now lay their snow white eggs just where they are expected to lay them—on the Tilford farm—and other tens of thousands of hens will soon be laying there.

Replying to a letter of inquiry, Mr. Tilford says concerning his chicken farm:

"My aim and ambition are that the Laurelton Farms shall become, in a way, an educational proposition, a poultry college, so to speak, where young men may be educated and equipped to successfully carry on a poultry business, either as breeders or producers."

Mr. Tilford's farm should be indeed "an educational proposition," since Frank Tilford intends that it shall be so, and since, as a casual part of his chicken farming career, he is able to announce that he has "successfully raised some twenty-five thousand chickens." What a dream that is for the would-be chicken farmer!

Those that have gone into chicken farming have been bitterly disappointed, at least as often as those that have gone gold hunting.

For the man who dreams of "five hundred hens and independence" we recommend two paragraphs from Mr. Tilford's letter:

"I am an amateur in the 'chicken business,' but I have found—on general principles—that people who are unfitted for business of any sort invariably seem impelled to go into the cigarette or chicken business, and in either case, the party is doomed—in fact, almost before he starts—doomed to utter failure.

"It may look easy to the casual observer, but, believe me, it requires just as much business ability, and care, and hard work, and patience, and determination, as any other legitimate business, and, I might add, an ample bit of capital, to succeed."

This newspaper has suggested to Mr. Tilford, and to other men of experience and ability, the desirability of enabling earnest citizens LACKING capital—especially capable women thrown upon their own resources—to take up chicken farming with some organized plan of co-operation promising success. Of this proposition Mr. Tilford writes:

"I think your scheme of starting a number of small farms most excellent, for the demand for honest products of both chickens and eggs has grown to be enormous, and is becoming more and more so every day."

This plan we submit to Mr. Tilford and to other men who know:

There should be one great central plant similar to that so marvellously developed near Lakewood by Tilford.

Much smaller enterprises should be started on the following basis:

Enough land to take care of as many chickens as one family could easily manage—and some extra land for a vegetable garden.

A house substantial, reasonable in price, with running water and a decent bathroom.

Such chicken farms could be built one after another—as many as might prove successful.

The houses for the chickens could be built under the direction of the central plant, in accordance with the latest scientific methods.

The big farm could act as salesman for all the little farms, taking the entire output of eggs and "broilers" at a fair price.

The big farm with a great incubator could hatch the eggs of the little farmers, or sell the newly hatched chicks at a reasonable price—thus eliminating a great deal of the risk and bother.

Weekly lectures by men from the United States Agricultural Department or from the State Department would be a feature of the chicken farming life.

Direct personal criticism by a representative of the big farm, advice and rebuke would be still more important.

Thus a colony could be formed, contented, prosperous men and women working under scientific direction.

A widow and her children could easily manage such a farm—and find happiness in place of anxiety.

The small professional man struggling for a living in the city might have his family on such a farm taking care of it, and finding his relaxation and health there from Saturday to Monday.

When the individual starts chicken farming alone and isolated, expense, disappointment, ignorance, lack of salesmanship and a million other troubles, including all the diseases that hens are heiresses to, drive him to failure almost inevitably.

But properly managed, properly directed under the control and with the encouragement of such a man as Frank Tilford, a great colony could be built up—one or more near each of the big cities of the country. And it should be done.

High grade human intelligence has yet to solve the problem of happy human existence on the land on a small scale.

It is time it were solved, for its solution is not impossible.

The Family Album

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WHEN I muse and dream of childhood and the golden days of youth,
When the world was smiles and sunshine, long before I knew the truth;
When I find myself enraptured with the days that are no more
And the memories of playmates, now on some far distant shore,
There is one grim recollection that is ever in my mind,
Marring all the pleasant pictures that we have to leave behind;
I can see it in my dreaming with a shudder and a grin—
Just the good old family album and the mugs contained therein.

Uncle Joseph, with his whiskers, looking like a pirate chief;
Aunt Melinda, with a scowl on that would make one turn the leaf;
Here a worn and tattered tintype of my rich old uncle Dan,
With a nose as red as rubies and a coat of barroom tan.
There a photograph of Silas—Silas was his oldest son—
Who was hanged for stealing horses somewhere back in '61.
I can see that group of faces and the memory makes me groan—
Just the good old family album on its centre table throne.

Often when I was a youngster and had played some youthful trick
Father used to tan me gently with a weeping willow stick;
But my mother never struck me—she would make me go instead
To the parlor centre table, when the rest had gone to bed.
She would make me turn the pages of the album lying there
And behold those awful pictures, each with its peculiar stare.
'Twas the grim ordeal that kept me from a lot of childish sin—
Just the good old family album and the mugs contained therein.

Galileo and Jupiter's Moons

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

IT was 304 years ago that the great Galileo discovered the satellites of Jupiter.

The first nature of the quartetts of fairy stars was instantly perceived. There could be no doubt that they were small bodies subordinate to Jupiter, attending about him and bearing the identical relationship to him that the moon bears to the earth.

Galileo's vision of Jupiter's moons was the telescope's first substantial gift to man, its initial overture to the literal yearning of the human mind toward a knowledge of the mysteries of infinite space. And a wonderful overture it was, full of profoundest significance, and destined to shake up all the thought systems of all the schools.

Charmed with the fascinating reflection that he had been permitted to gaze upon objects which, so to that time, the eye of man had never beheld, Galileo continued to search the heavens with his strange new instrument, and the following year the telescope showed him the phases of Venus.

Seventy-five years before, Copernicus had launched his famous heliocentric theory, that the earth and other planets are the members of a system of which the sun is the centre, and his ignorant and infuriated opponents said to him mockingly: "If your doctrine were true, Venus would show phases like the moon," to which Copernicus meekly replied: "You are right. I know not what to say to you; but God is good, and in time He will find an answer to your objection." The God-given answer came when the rude telescope of Galileo showed the phases of Venus.

The Copernican theory was no longer a theory, but a demonstrated fact. Copernicus had been dead sixty-eight years, and his memory was under the ban of the infallibilities, but along came Galileo with the facts about Jupiter and Venus which would not down, and round to those facts all the world was to come at last.

In-Shoots

When happiness is exclusive it is not the real thing.

It is possible for a man to write heroic epics and still look like a sissy.

Love at first sight can generate a lot of foolishness even if it is usually short lived.

Conscience may be giving a lot of fellows about us more joy than we imagine.

Some New Year Philosophy

By ELBERT HUBBARD

THE chief business of the old-time philosopher was to philosophize.

To philosophize as a business is to miss the highest philosophy.

To do a certain amount of useful work every day, and not trouble about either the past or the future, is the highest wisdom.

The man who drags the past behind him, and wears his future for a bustle, spreads the present out thin.

Go out into the woods to study the birds; you walk and walk and walk and see no birds. But just sit down on a log and wait, and lo! the branches are full of song.

Those who pursue culture never catch up with her.

Culture takes alarm at pursuit and avoids the stealthy pounce.

Culture is a woman, and a certain amount of indifference wins her. Ardent wooing will not secure your heart's desire.

* * *

The highest philosophy consists in keeping your health, preserving good cheer, and doing that which is useful.

Health is the most natural thing in the world. Nature is on our side—she is trying to keep us happy and well, because she needs us in her business. When we disobey the laws of health we suffer; when we obey them we are well.

And so here are a few simple facts about health—things which we should all know:

Ninety-nine people out of a hundred who go to a physician have no organic disease, but are merely suffering from some result of wrong living. This disability we call a functional disorder. Functional disorders continued may evolve an organic disease.

Most individuals who have a disease are suffering from the evil effects of medication, the medicine having been taken to relieve a functional disorder.

Many diseases are the result of medication which has been prescribed to relieve and take away a beneficent and warning symptom on the part of Nature.

And on these points all physicians are fully agreed.

The people you see waiting in the lobbies of doctors' offices are mostly suffering through poisoning caused by an excess of food.

Nature is forever trying to keep people well, and most so-called "disease," which word means lack of ease, is self-limiting, and tends to cure itself.

The one theme of Ecclesiastes is moderation. Buddha wrote it down that the greatest word in any language is "Equanimity." William Morris said that the finest blessing of life was systematic, useful work. Saint Paul declared that the greatest thing in the world was love. Moderation, Equanimity, Work and Love—you need no other physician.

But to put it another way, here's the recipe:

First—Deep breathing in the open air with your mouth closed.

Second—Moderation in eating; simple dishes—Fletcherize.

Third—Exercise at least one hour in the open each day—walking, working in the garden, playing with the children.

Fourth—Sleep eight hours in a thoroughly ventilated room.

Fifth—Drink all the water between meals you can get.

Sixth—Don't bother to forgive your enemies—just forget them.

Seventh—Keep busy—it is a beautiful world, and we must and will and can have it more beautiful than we found it.

Questions Answered

I. H. P.—The society known as "The Daughters of the Revolution" was organized in New York city August 20, 1891. Eligibility to membership is restricted to "women who are lineal descendants of an ancestor who was a military or naval or marine officer, soldier, sailor or marine, in actual service under the authority of any of the thirteen colonies or States, or of the Colonial Congress, and remained always loyal to such authority, or descendants of the signers of the Declaration of Independence or of members of the Continental Congress."

H. L. M.—You are right in maintaining that Frederick the Great was a Freemason. He joined the order in May, 1738, very much against the wishes of his father, Frederick William, who, it seems, had no love for the craft. When Frederick William died, in May, 1740, Frederick celebrated his freedom by holding a great Masonic meeting. The young King appears to have taken great interest in the order, and the stimulus given Freemasonry by the great sovereign and soldier is still felt by the order throughout the Germanic countries.

E. S.—If by "enlightenment" you mean literacy, then Germany is at the head of the nations. In Germany every one can read and write, the illiteracy being so close to zero that it is not worth mentioning. For the year 1900 the illiteracy for the various European countries was as follows: Illiterates per thousand in Austria, 426; Belgium, 249; France, 161; Hungary, 427; Italy, 618; Portugal, 792; Russia, 775; Spain, 639; Denmark, 2; United Kingdom, 10; Sweden, 4; Norway, 4; Germany, 2.

Office Holders—Elimination of Spoils Will Attract Men of Quality

By REV. C. H. PARKHURST

THERE are two motives that operate to make salaried positions attractive; one motive is the pay that goes with them, the other is the dignity that attaches to them and the opportunity they afford for promoting public good. The relative amount of influence that the two exert upon the man seeking or holding a position will depend very much upon the quality of the man.

In one case it will be the money there is in it; in another the opportunity it affords of being of some use to society. In many instances some part is played by each of the two motives. Very rarely are circumstances such that one can afford to ignore the money aspect of a paid position. We have to live, and that means a certain amount of dollars and cents.

A talented college professor once remarked: "The work of instructing students is to me so glorious a work and so dignified a one that I hate to receive a salary for it, but I am so situated financially that I am obliged to." The remark was made almost fifty years ago, but it was one of those big-minded and large-hearted utterances that stick in the memory. There was once a minister that served a certain congregation one Sabbath as supply. He had been invited at the close of the evening service the treasurer of the church came forward, and plunking down twenty dollars on the pulpit remarked, "There is your pay," which meant—so much Gospel at one end of the balances and so much money at the other end.

The promptness with which the minister was paid for his day's work was commendable; but otherwise the proceeding was an insult to him and to the truth which he preached, for it was an implication that the preacher had no purpose but to commercialize religion, and that he practiced his profession only for the sake of what was in it for him. The same principle applies everywhere, all the way up and down, from the Mayor to the man who sweeps the street, puts out fires or pounds the pavement. No man ever does good work if he does it exclusively for what he himself is going to get out of it; and the higher the grade of work the more true that is.

When a new administration comes into power the official positions requiring to be filled are called "plums." That is because the general public, and especially the office-seekers, lay the stress on shekels rather than on the value that services rendered will be to the city. Such seekers swarm around the appointing power at the same impulse that causes doves to flutter around a poultryman when he comes among them with a bag of corn.

The same degrading interpretation is given to public service when it is said that "to the victors belong the spoils" of office, an expression which converts positions of public trust into so much booty that has been captured from a defeated enemy. The money consideration will attract men in larger numbers but of lesser value, while the sense of office considered as opportunity for promoting the public weal will attract men in lesser numbers but of larger value; so that to develop the sentiment that office is not plums nor booty, but a sacred trust to be exercised in the public interest, will be so much done toward elevating the tone of an administration.

The World Will End in a Hundred Million Years

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

NO man expects to see the end of the world arrive in his day, any more than he expects, if he is in good health, to die tomorrow. Yet there is a widespread, and perhaps universal, belief that the earth is no more immortal than man; only its term of existence is almost infinitely long compared with his.

Science gives unquestionable support to this view, and every new discovery seems to make more certain the conclusion that our world cannot last forever.

But there are two opposite theories as to the manner in which the earth, as the abode of life, will come to an end. One assumes that its destruction will be by heat and the other that it will be by cold. The discovery of the mysterious substance radium, which possesses the property of continually giving off heat, has imparted renewed impetus to the first of these theories, which, it may be remarked, as a matter of nationality, is in accord with the Bible prophecies.

"The heavens shall roll up as a scroll, and the earth shall dissolve with fervent heat."

A most ominous account of the part that radium may play in the ultimate destruction of the earth is given in a book by Professor J. Joly, entitled, "Radioactivity and Geology." If you feel any curiosity about the fate of the globe you live on you might find much food for thought in reading that volume. You would also learn a great many scientific facts.

The argument on which the assumption that radium, or its "mother element," uranium, may finally bring the world to a fiery end is based on the fact that a particle of radium keeps itself continually, by some inner process, at a temperature nearly three degrees above that of its surroundings. In an hour the radium emits enough heat to raise its own weight of water from the freezing to the boiling point. And this store of heat is so vast that a single atom of radium will continue to give it forth at an unvarying rate for about 2,000 years!

If there were only a certain quantity of radium in the earth which could not be renewed, then we might assume that at the end of two or three thousand years this source of heat would be exhausted.

But radium itself appears to be continually produced from uranium, which is an incomparably more abundant substance. So we conclude that the earth may have been heated internally by renewed supplies of radium for untold millions of years, and will continue to be thus heated for millions of years to come.

Now, following a line of reasoning which would be too long to enter upon here, Professor Joly shows that if, at the present time, the nucleus of the earth contains as much as one-five-hundred-thousand-millionth of a gram of radium, then its temperature must be rising at such a rate that in about 100,000,000 years the earth will be entirely melted inside.

The same reasoning carried further leads to the conclusion that the earth may have been alternately melted and cooled on several times in the past. When it is in a molten state the free radiation from the surface produces a crust, which thickens to a certain point, and then the inner accumulation of heat brings about another melting from the interior outward.

The phenomenon of new stars is appealed to as lending support to this view. Again and again astronomers have seen a new star burst forth at some point in the sky. Generally it has been assumed that they are due to collisions in the heavens, but it is, perhaps, equally probable that they arise from the accumulation of heat in some dark celestial body, causing it to flame out into incandescence. Other stars are known to have disappeared, and their disappearance may have been caused by the cooling off of their surfaces.
